Boromir was King Richard's Captain of the Guard; and was the only soldier left standing when the infidels captured Richard in Jerusalem. He continued to do what he did best and protect his king. One day he was dragged from the rooms they were being held in, and thrown into a dark cell. He was whipped and beaten, many times, and each time he refused to scream. When he finally came to he was again in the room with Richard, but this time everything was different... he could hear his King's heartbeat.
It was only his duty that kept him from attacking.
